NATION'S HONORED DEAD

Remains of Benjamin Harrison Laid to Rest in Crown Hill, Cemetery, Indianapolis.

MULTITUDES HONORED HIS MEMORY.

Impressive Services at the Home, at the First Presbycerian Church and at the Grave-President McKinley Among the Most Sincere Mourners-All Was Well Ordered.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 18 .- In the center of a hollow square composed were yesterday afternoon interred in the family lot in Crown Hill ceme-

Close by the grave were the members of his family, President McKinley and other visitors of distinction and the more intimate friends of Gen. Harrison. Back a distance of 50 yards behind the ropes, guarded zealcusly by a large force of police, stood, with uncovered heads the great multitude who knew him not so well as did they who stood beside the freshly upturned earth, but who honored him and admired him fully as much. It is doubtful if any public man, at least in this generation, was borne to his last resting place among so many manifestations of respect. Of passionate grief there was little beyond the members of his family, but the tribute of respect was universal. It came from all alike, form those of his own political faith and from those who differed with him concerning what is best for the nation's good; from men who have been his life-long friends, and from those who knew him merely by sight and to whom he never spoke. It came from women and children, from white and black, from all conditions and kinds of people. There was no exception anywhere to the expression that the nation had lost one of its ablest men and the greatest man of his generation in his own state.

By the grave stood the chief magistrate of the nation, and behind the representative were all the street arabs of Gen. Harrison's city-every grade of humanity in America, between the two, was represented in the crowd-and in them all there was but the one feeling, that a man had died who was honest at all times with himself and with others and whose ability and character were such as the naion could ill afford to lose

At the home, before the reamins were taken to the First Presbyterian church, where the full service was held, there were brief exercises for the members of the family and more immediate friends of Gen. Harrison. Possibly 150 people were present. Mrs. Harrison did not appear, but remained in her room until it was time to leave for the church.

President McKinley, accompanied by Gov. Durbin, called at the house about one o'clock. At about the same time came the members of President ually arrived until the short services June 23 to July 2, inclusive, one-half were over.

The florist's wagon backed up to the front of the house and a number of the larger pieces were loaded into the the church.

The procession was to have left the in readiness. The doors were thrown wide open and the honorary pallbearers came down the walk leading to the street. After them came the active pallbearers, bearing the casket.

While the casket was being placed in the hearse the honorary pallbearers stood to one side with bared heads. As soon as the hearse had moved from the front of the house the carriages came up rapidly and the family and visitors entered them. The undertaker and his assistants held a list of the occupants of each carriage as it should go in the procession and as quickly as a carriage stopped the people to whom it belonged were ushered in and it moved down the street to

After the prayer the choir rendered the hymn, "Rock of Ages," in a beautiful and impressive manner. This was Gen. Harrison's favorite hymn and it is said it is the only one he ever attempted to sing.

Following the hymn Dr. Niccols read portions of Scripture from the fourteenth chapter of St. John and the twenty-first chapter of Revelations, after which Dr. Haines delivered the address.

After the address Dr. Niccols offered prayer. The services were closed with a baritone solo, "Hark. of fully 15,000 of his fellow citizens Hark, My Soul," rendered by Edward the remains of Benjamin Harrison Nell, in which the entire choir joined in the chorus.

THE after-effects of the grip are often disastrous. It is commonly known to the medical fraternity that the numerous ailments and complications which follow the grip are apt to be more serious than the acute stage of the disease.

Some people have the grip very lightly. They may be confined to the house only a day or two and yet a long train of d.sagreeable, disabling symptoms follow. All sorts of tonics and stimulating remedies have been devised to meet this condition. None of them can compare in results with Peruna.
